About the event

The highly skilled are fleeing the fields and Europe's rural areas are short of labour. Will migration actually fuel a better future for left-behind regions?

This webinar dives deep into the brain-drain that affects most rural regions by looking at the drivers that make people move and the regional characteristics that make people stay. Learn about the “The Human Migration Database” and how to leverage social media in mobility data analysis. We also explore how research-based policies might give left-behind regions a new chance to gain back those brains.

We're looking forward to showing you our research, discussing new approaches and meeting you!

Attend if you want to

- Be surprised: At the novel social media data that clears the knowledge fog about migration motivations.
- Have your questions answered: By experts and practitioners, especially about the future of Europe's rural regions.
- Expand your policy perspectives: Through a nuanced discussion of what disrupting a changing demography really takes.
